SCHOLARSHIP: IN PROGRESS

1. "A Controlled Experimental Evaluation of the Robert A. Dennis, Jr., Federal Reentry Court, Northern District Of Florida." This six-year (2012-2018) evaluation employs a true experimental design with randomization of offenders to experimental and control groups to measure the effectiveness of a federal reentry court operating in the United States District Court, Northern District of Florida.
2. "Police-Worn Body Cameras." West Palm Beach Police Department. This three-year (2015-2018) evaluation of police-worn body cameras (BWC) uses police and community surveys and agency records to measure effectiveness.
3. My colleagues and I administered surveys to sworn personnel in two Florida police departments before and after BWC were implemented to examine police officer perceptions and attitudes toward BWCs. We are currently analyzing that data. Second, we conducted two waves of a survey of residents of two Florida counties to assess community perceptions of BWCs and law enforcement. An academic journal manuscript is currently under review for publication on the first wave of those community surveys.
4. "High-Impact Learning." Analysis of student perceptions in Scotland summer study abroad (2015).

TEACHING

Face to face, online and blended instructional environments. Undergraduate and graduate Research Methods, Correctional Policy, Institutional and Community Corrections, Crime Prevention and Control, Capital Punishment, Comparative and Historical Criminal Justice, Criminological Theory, and Digital Crime. Many of the courses I teach are multimedia media enhanced and web based. In Summers 2011, 2013 and 2015 I supervised students studying Scottish criminal justice at the University of West Scotland, Hamilton, Scotland. In Summer 2012, I hosted 20 students from the same Scottish University at UWF to study US criminal justice.

Teaching recognition: Commendation for Teaching and Contributions to UA's DPA Curriculum; twice nominated for UA's National Alumni Association Excellence in Teaching Award; twice invited to teach honors seminars in UA's Honors Program; former member of UA's A & S Freshman Mentoring Program; invited faculty mentor-UA Faculty Senate; invited Lilly Fellow Teaching Mentor; 1996 Southern Criminal Justice Association Educator of the Year; faculty mentor UWF's Honors' Program; and student opinion ratings of the courses I teach are consistently at and above department and college norms.
